++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Some rain for north and parts of west, fine elsewhere.

This Evening and Tonight:
Southeastern parts of the UK mostly fine with patchy low cloud and fog. Heavier rain crossing northern Scotland, while weakening rain band stalls, stretching roughly from eastern Scotland to southwest England. Feeling chilly across Northern Ireland and northwest Scotland.

Saturday:
Band of patchy rain, lying eastern Scotland to southwest England, giving way to scattered showers, possibly heavy later. Drier either side, with some warm sunshine developing, particularly across southeastern parts.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Showers for many on Sunday, heavy at times especially in the east. Showers in places Monday and Tuesday ahead of rain and strong winds spreading from the northwest later.
